LET'S TALK INGREDIENTS:

Herbs that work together

Elderberry fruit: This herb is high in vitamin C, quercetin, phenolic acids, and anthocyanins, all well known antioxidants that support immune health. It is known to help support a normal respiratory system and maintain open airway passages.

Olive leaf: These leaves are abundant in oleuropein, a powerful antioxidant that supports heart health and immune function by activating the movement of NK, cytokine, and white blood cells. Today, scientific evidence shows that the components of the olive leaf can help support a modulated immune response, making this herb a great immune system adaptogen.

Mullein leaf: Mullein is packed with high-potency antioxidants that support a healthy inflammation response and normal respiratory and sinus health. Particularly useful during seasonal transitions, Mullein leaf supports calm bronchioles and mucus-producing cells, encouraging clear breathing.

Vitamin C: This vitamin is well-known for its ability to boost the overall immune system. It encourages white blood cell, T-cell, and antibody movement and is also known to support cytokine messengers for a more coordinated immune response. Another benefit is the increase in the production of collagen, which supports the epithelial barrier of cells, and is crucial to protecting cell health from external invaders.

Zinc: This mineral is necessary for the proper growth and activation of T-cells in the immune system. It is also responsible for cell-mediated immunity, or the modulation of white blood cells, NK-cells, and cytokines, in response to an antigen.
